CONGRESS.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 27.

[Mr. Nichola's speech concluded.]

The gentleman from South Carolina had called the tranfaction alluded to foolifh, weak and ineffectual, becaufe no individual could produce a change in the conduct of the French government. Mr. N. differed in opinion from that gentleman. He believed in moft inftances, the efforts of an individual muft have been weak and fooliih, and brought fhame and difgrace upon the perfon who undertook them; but he believed, if ever there was a cafe in which an individual might be ferviceable in reftoring peace to two countries, it is the prefent. Is it not notorious, faid Mr. N. that if the French have enemies in this country, they have been continually playing into their hands from the commencement of the difpute betwixt this country and that? He appealed to the gentleman from S. Carolina himfelf, whether he had not received more fupport in his favorite objects from the conduct of France, than from any thing elfe? Their fyftem had all along been calculated to produce a total dependence in this country upon the enemies of France. If this was fo, the French were playing the moft unnatural and fooliih game that ever was played by any country. It ought to have been in the power of a child to have illuminated France on this fubject. He afked whether the outrages of the French government had not been received in this country with triumph and exultation? He knew they had, and he had feen them made the foundation of darling meafures in this houfe. This being the cafe, faid Mr. N. was it not in the power of an individual to fay to perfons in power in that country, "You are acting very unwifely; you are lofing all your friends in America; as to fuppofing you have a party in that country who would be ready to join your ftandard, were you to hoift it there, it is nonfenfe; but you are eftablifhing a national hatred there, which will throw weight into the fcale of your enemy." Would not a conduct of this kind have appeared proper to a perfon of the commoneft underftanding, and much more fo to the gentleman alluded to? and fuch a repreferitative could have produced none but a good effect. Without knowing any thing of the miffion of this gentleman, (for he had left Philadelphi a month before it took place) he did believe that obfervations of this kind had occurred to that gentleman as likely to produce a good effect, as they had occurred to thoufands befides in this country; and they were obfervations which an American had a right, and which he might conceive it to be his duty to make, and which muft have had their effect upon the French government.

Mr. N. had heard a great deal about fubjugation. The gentleman from South Carolina had expreffed an opinion that whilft the people under a popular government remain united, they cannot be conquered by force. He would himfelf go farther, and declare it to be his opinion and it was founded upon a knowledge of the difpofition of men who think your government have done extremely bad acts, that fo long as the people are not actually oppreffed, and they can fee in their governors the leaft of confidence, no attempt at dividing or fubjugating the people of this country could be fuccefsful.—[illegible] Only would they [illegible] and [illegible] Be believed there is a perfect unanimity in this refpect. Let the government, therefore, faid he, take care not to infufe difatisfaction into the minds of thofe people, by carrying things with too high a hand by oppreffing one part of the people, to benefit another. Mr. N. believed that the gentleman from South Carolina would not have been willing to have lived under any of the old governments, the overturning of which he fo feelingly deplored. Is it, faid he, the fault of the people that they live under bad governments?—or becaufe they are bad, are they never to be changed? Are people who are bound down by the chains of tyranny, for ever to remain fo? And was it right or juft, to charge the violence and blood, which too generally attend revolutions upon the people who have been oppreffed, inftead of their oppreffors? Surely not. The evils muft be deplored, but they ought to be charged to the proper account.

Mr. N. believed more evil was to be apprehended in this country from the votaries of defpotifm, than from the votaries of France. Gentlemen are conftantly telling the world, that nothing ought to be done, no fentiment offered in oppofition to regular government. Why? Becaufe it produces divifions in a country.—And this is not only the language held here, but it is held in all the old governments of the world. What do fuch opinions lead to? Certainly to favour the principles of defpotifm, which it was to be lamented, have of late, had a greater fpread than thofe of liberty, owing to the abufes which had been committed under its facred name, and the ufe made of thofe abufes; and the doctrines now held are calculated to fubvert all the liberties of our country, by filencing every oppofition to the meafures of government, however violent they may be. Gentlemen cry, this is not the time to clamour againft the government, all ought to be union—and this will continue to be the cry, fo that a time for bringing a government back to its firft principles will never arrive, and abufes will thus be perpetrated. Principles, Mr. N. faid, he was forry to fay it, had gained ground in this country, of late, which nothing but terror and alarm could have produced

Mr. N. Smith faid, the gentlemen from Pennfylvania and Virginia have taken ground perfectly characteriftic of the two men; whilft the gentleman from Virginia comes forward and boldly avows the right of an individual to interfere in our negociations with a foreign government, the gentleman from Pennfylvania goes into detail, and pleads an abatement in the refolution; fays it goes too far in fome refpects, and not far enough in others; that it will prevent correfpondencies about private concerns, and fo on. Why this fort of trifling, if it were not intended to lead the houfe off from the fpirit of the refolution? The gentleman from Pennfylvania knows to much of legiflative bufinefs not to know, that this refolution, worded as it now is, cannot pafs into a law; that it is only intended as an inftruction to a committee upon which to report a bill, which bill will have to undergo the fcrutiny of that gentleman, and the houfe. He did not himfelf like all the provifions of this refolution; he thought the interference inftead of being general; would have been better confined to France; but thefe are matters for after conlideration. The only proper enquiry, at prefent is, Is there, reafon for legiflative interference, or not? Is there, or not, danger to be apprehended from the interfence of individuals in bufinefs of this fort? For himfelf he had no hefitation in faying he believed there is danger to be apprehended from this fource. He conlidered this as a meafure of defence; of efficient defence, pointed to the danger—danger with which we are theatened—danger from the diplomatic fkill of a nation well verfed in this fkill. We have, faid Mr. S. heretofore, made provifion for the raifing of armies. There were for remote danger; but this is a provifion againft danger which immediately threatens us—a danger which has affailed us for many years paft—a danger which has produced the moft direful effects in this country. He himfelf never thought there was immediate danger to be apprehended from the arms of France, though, at fome future period, there might be danger from this fource, but their diplomatic fkill ought to be conftantly and ftrictly guarded againft.

"If, faid Mr. S. we refect for a fingle moment upon the precedes and purfuits of the French nation, we fhall fee that their every fyftem is to divide and conquer [illegible] Be [illegible] party in the country, [illegible] [illegible] Bacon Bacon to fubjugate, and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The reſolution was put and carried with a diviſion; and Meſſrs. Otis & Joſiah Parker were appointed a committee to wait upon the Preſident therewith.

The houſe then, according to the order of the day, reſolved itſelf into a committee of the whole on the bill providing an uniform ſyſtem of bankruptcy throughout the United States; when, after agreeing to ſome amendments, one of conſiderable length and importance propoſed by Mr. Sewall, providing, that inſtead of the Commiſſioners having power to take ſuch order as they ſhall deem expedient with the body of a bankrupt, a more lenient proviſion.

Mr. N. Smith moved the committee to riſe, that time might be afforded to have the amendment printed and conſidered.

Mr. Harper ſaw no neceſſity for this. If the committee were to riſe, for the purpoſe of printing every amendment that was offered, the bill would not be gone through in ſix years. He did not himſelf perfectly underſtand the amendment, but he underſtood enough of it to vote againſt it. The proviſion, as it ſtands, is copied from the Engliſh law; the committee amongſt whom was the mover of the amendment,) was ſatisfied with it, and he hoped it would be retained.

Mr. N. Smith hoped the gentleman's anxiety to paſs this bill, would not force gentlemen to vote upon propoſitions which they do not underſtand. The gentleman himſelf confeſſes he does not underſtand the amendment; and yet his fondneſs for the bill as reported, will lead him to vote againſt it. If he chuſes to act thus, Mr. S. hoped other gentlemen might be permitted to act more deliberately.

The queſtion for riſing was put and carried 44 to 21, and leave was given to the committee to ſit again.

Mr. J. Parker ſaid, he was deſired by the committee appointed on the ſubject of the Navy, to aſk leave of the Houſe to have printed for their uſe, a report from the Secretary of the Navy.—Agreed.

On motion of Mr. Otis, the Houſe went into a committee of the whole on the bill to alter the ſtamp duties impoſed upon foreign bills of exchange and bills of lading, by an act, entitled "An act laying duties on ſtamped vellum, parchment and paper," and further to amend the ſame.

This bill propoſes that, after a certain time, the duties paid upon foreign bills of exchange and bills of lading ſhall ceaſe, and that all foreign bills of exchange, whether for a ſmall or large ſum, ſhall pay a duty of 20 cents; on any note or bill of lading for goods to be exported from one diſtrict to another in the United States, not being in the ſame ſtate, 4 cents; if to any foreign port, 10 cents; any policy of aſſurance, or inſtrument in nature thereof, other than thoſe ſpecified in the former act, not exceeding 500 dollars, 25 cents; above that ſum, one dollar; and the ſaid duties ſhall be chargeable upon each and every bill of exchange and bill of lading, without reſpect to the number contained in a ſet. And every draft, or order for the payment of money within the United States, ſhall be chargeable with the ſame rates of duties, as by the former act are chargeable upon inland bills of exchange, excepting only orders for the payment of money on demand, drawn upon the Preſident and Directors, or Caſhier of any Bank.

A debate took place on ſeveral propoſitions which were made to amend various proviſions of this bill, which continued till 3 o'clock, when a motion was made to adjourn, and the houſe adjourned accordingly.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 3.

SELECTED POETRY.

"I give my NOISELESS hours, blest POETRY, to thee."

ON MIRTH.

Fantastic wreaths in wild confusion hung,
Where antic sport and blue-eyed pleasures play;
Here goblets glistened and here syrens sung,
And careless revels stole the hours away:
More dimpled mirth, with cheek of roseate hue,
Despotic reigns these brilliant roofs among;
At his high call, enamoured myriads flew,
Weave the light dance or wake the festive song.
But ah! what means that wild tumultuous shout?
That frantic laugh is tinctured with alloy;
What mean these urgies? what this midnight rout?
Tell me, my soul, Oh! say, can this be joy?
These transient starts, embers of dying fire,
Glow for a moment, sparkle and expire.

A valuable Mill and a vacant Mill-Seat for Sale.

By virtue of an order from the High Court of Chancery, in Virginia, will be sold, at Public Vendue, on the 26th day of February next,

A MERCHANT MILL, and four acres of LAND, more or less, the property of John Mandeville, adjoining Cameron Mills, and about a mile and a half from Alexandria. The property being so near Town, may be very profitable in the hands of an active man.

The Mill-Seat will be sold with the Mill or separate, as may be thought best, on the day of sale. It lays on Holmes's Run, a little below Robert Allison's Mill, and nearly opposite to the dwelling-house of W. H. Terrett, Esq.—is said to contain four acres and a quarter—has a great sufficiency of fall for an overshot mill, with liberty of cutting a mill-race, &c.—The title is thought to be good, and the deeds may be seen by applying to the subscribers.

Two thousand six hundred dollars of the purchase money will be paid down; six months credit will be given for the remainder, on receiving bonds, with good security, payable to us; and the high court of Chancery doth further "order that the proper parties do execute conveyances to the purchasers under this order, but not until they shall severally comply with the conditions of the sale, which is intended to be after a receipt of the last payment.
